Satori 2012

Take the ferry across to Dunoon and Cowal in Argyll and come experience the unparalleled scenery, the historic locations, the friendly people and the exciting activities that will make your visit a memorable one. The unspoiled Cowal Peninsula retains a unique Scottish identity that is reflected in its towns and villages, its arts and crafts and its various events throughout the year.

If you love lochs, glens, sea, mountains and forests, you will find them in abundance in this beautiful part of the world.

Dunoon is the seaboard gateway to the Scottish Highlands, including the Loch Lomond and Trossachs National Park. It is a great touring base with an excellent selection of accommodation, shops and eating places to choose from.

Dunoon

The Waverley

In fact, Dunoon has a history of knowing how to cater for visitors ever since it became a prime holiday destination in the 1800's in the heyday of the paddle steamer. The last seagoing paddle steamer in the world, The Waverley, still calls in regularly at Dunoon, Blairmore and Tighnabruaich piers throughout the summer months.

Dunoon is bordered to the north by the villages of Kirn, Hunter's Quay and Sandbank, and by the Holy Loch. Sandbank had 2 boat yards established in the late 1800's, one of which (Robertson's) built 2 challengers for the Americas Cup.

Sandbank and the Holy Loch

The Holy Loch is about a mile wide at its broadest part and between two and three miles long at high water. During the Second World War the Loch was a submarine base, and in the 1960's through the early 1990's it played host to an American Naval Base which consisted of a floating dry-dock and supply ship with shore based installations. Now you will find the Holy Loch Marina located there.

Kilmun Church

Continuing along the shore road, you will pass Kilmun. Kilmun Church was built in 1422 by Sir Duncan Campbell, the chief of the Campbell clan, and acted as a burial ground for the Earls of Argyll. The Earls were buried in the church or in a small chapel at the north access of the building. During the 17th Century many individuals who held important positions in the community were also buried at the church. Subsequently, Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell was buried here. She was the first woman of modern times to graduate MD in medicine from medical school (in the USA) and was a pioneer in educating women in medicine.

Kilmun also plays host to Kilmun Arboretum which contains a wide range of tree specimens from all over the world.

Beyond Kilmun are Loch Long and the villages of Strone, Blairmore and Ardentinny. Blairmore's newly refurbished pier was officially reopened in May 2005 after decades of closure. North-west of Dunoon, following the A815 road, you will find beautiful Glen Massan where the River Massan is one of the best in Cowal for salmon and sea trout fishing and is a favourite spot with anglers. Beyond here, is Puck's Glen, a popular walking area, and the Benmore Botanic Gardens, one of Cowal's major attractions.
